STATESKNICKERBOCKER

This is First and Last Lesson
Visit to Tokio
Teaches

(Note: When Japan has finished with China, she will strike again and the victim may be America, England or Russia. H. R. Knickerbocker, the noted foreign correspondent of International News Service, reveals in the following article, fifth of a series of twelve, Knickerbocker has just returned to Paris after months in Shanghai and Nanking and after a 12,500-mile trip across Asia and Europe to report to the United States on "The Yellow Typhoon and Red Storm Warnings.")

PARIS, Jan. 21.—(INS)—Japan will strike again. This is the first and last lesson that a visit to Tokio teaches, however short the sojourn may be.

Where will she strike? After China, what?

Among differing schools of thought, General Shigeru Honjo, conqueror of Manchuria, put it this way in a memorandum which he passed up through his former minister of war, General Jiro Minami, now Governor General of Korea, to His Imperial Japanese Majesty.

"After we have conquered China, our empire will be so enriched by its natural resources that we can afford to increase our navy until it is strong enough to drive America to the east of Hawaii, leaving the Philippines in our hands. After America has been driven out of the Far East, the English at Hongkong and Singapore will not be much trouble, for our navy can easily take these two places."

This memorandum, which I distributed by accident, has taken its place among a score of similar ones in the imperial archives. It deserves further consideration, as it appears to be little known. It must be an additional worry for his imperial majesty because he has constantly to deal with three schools of thought among his subjects.

One believes it would be best to strike first the Soviet Union, then England, then America. Another favors knocking out England first then the Soviet Union, then America. A third prefers to take on America first, then the Soviet Union, then England.

Two considerations at present impede the Japanese scholars of war from putting their program into practice. The first is that the three schools are constantly quarreling among themselves. The second is that a few in each school occasionally wonder if their appointed victims will allow themselves to be picked off one by one. These few, however, are known as sissies.

Power in Japan is divided among the navy, the army, and the business world. The navy is divided between those who want to destroy England first, and those who prefer to wipe out first the American fleet. The army is divided between those who wish to strike now at the Soviet Union and those who wish to strike later. The business world is divided between those who are making money out of the present war and want more of it, and those who are losing money and want no more war. The last are known as traitors.

No victims of future aggression have ever been so fully warned by the aggressor as the western powers have been warned by Japanese spokesmen. Yet there are still optimists in the western world who refuse to believe what the Japanese tell them. Each new attack by the Japanese armed forces on western nationals reduces the number of western optimists, and even the implacably cheerful Times of London now admits that "the incidents show that the Japanese crusaders are, whether instinctively or deliberately, bent on the extrusion of the white powers from China."

America, however, always buoyant, still leads perhaps in the number of persons resolved to believe the best and willing to accept the Tokio Foreign Office's assurance that Admiral Suetsugu, minister of the interior and candidate for the premiership of Nippon, was wrongly quoted when he declared in a Japanese political review:

"The commercial interests of the whites must disappear before the sun of the Nipponese mission. The yokes of the whites over the yellow must disappear. Of course a rapid emancipation will mean a general conflagration, but let there be no misunderstanding, the result will be the same, a general conflagration. So fate decrees."

Such a placid forecast of Japan's

Rotarians See How Auto Tires Are Tested

Bristol Rotary members were witnesses of a moving picture which illustrated the development and testing of tires by racing on the hot salt flats of Lake Bonneville, Utah, when the Club met in regular weekly session at the Elks' Home yesterday afternoon. Ted Schwartz of the Firestone Rubber Company was in charge of the showing. The pictures showed the famous automobile race driver, Ab Jenkins, in some of his speed tests for tires.

Frank Volt, president of the Club, was in charge of the meeting which was well attended. Elwood L. Barton, Morrisville, was a guest at the meeting.

Tentative arrangements were announced for the joint meeting and Ladies' night to be held with the Morrisville club which was founded by the Bristol club.

GRAND COULEE DAM TO CREATE GARDEN SPOT

Greatest Engineering Project
Ever Undertaken by Man,
To Be Finished in 5 Years

IN SAGE BRUSH DESERT

(Note: This is the first of three articles on the construction of Grand Coulee Dam on the Columbia river, "the biggest thing in the world" and its significance.)

By Wilfred Brown
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

COULEE DAM, Wash., Jan. 21.—(INS)—In the bleak, sage brush desert of Central Washington the biggest thing in the world is daily growing bigger.

Grand Coulee Dam, the greatest engineering project ever undertaken by man, already exceeds in size the world's second largest structure—Boulder Dam—and it will require five years more of intense activity by 6,000 men and an intricate maze of machinery to finish it.

Completed, the dam will harness the power of America's second greatest river and transform an area of desert larger than some American states into one of the most productive garden spots of the nation.

Work in the deep canyon of the Columbia River, selected by the U. S. Bureau of Reclamation for its most ambitious project, rushes forward 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

In daylight there is bewildering movement everywhere.—Diesel-powered trains haul gargantuan buckets of liquid concrete along steel trestles above the part of the dam that already blocks the river and diverts it from its ancient channel.—Gigantic power shovels that look like miniature from vista points above gouge into the canyon walls.—A rumbling, endless conveyor belt, more than a mile long, moves gravel from pits to humming cement mixing plants on either side of the river.—Chugging tugboats shove loaded barges about on the surface of the stream. Whistles sound divergent tones, some as signals and some to summon various executives to the telephone.

At night the scene might be an amusement park out of Gulliver, or one of the visions from Dante's Inferno. The noise is still there, with a myriad of blazing lights, some stationary, some moving, some dancing—with dark, fantastic forms moving to and fro.

Actually, of course, there is no confusion. All motion is carefully planned and controlled, for maximum efficiency, by engineers of the Mason-Walsh-Atkinson-Kier company, (better known as M-W-A-K), the dam contractor. An intricate telephone system keeps all divisions in constant communication with the "brain center" of the central office.

The magnitude of the dam is almost beyond comparison. Completed, the $394,000,000 project will stand 550 feet above bed-rock, 4,300 feet long, 500 feet thick at the base and 20 on top. It will require more than 11,250,000 cubic yards of concrete—more than enough to pave a

DEBATE WHETHER "POP" IS HOLDING HIS OWN

Six Newtown Men Participate
In Discussion at P. T. A.
Meeting

200 IN ATTENDANCE

NEWTOWN, Jan. 21.—"Is Pop Holding His Own?" was the subject for a heated debate among members of Newtown Parent-Teacher Association, this week, in the high school auditorium.

Six men, all benedictines, participated in this unusual argument, with some discovering that they were on the wrong side of the contest.

William S. Tomlinson was in charge, introducing members of the team. The affirmative side was participated in by Reuben P. Kester, Dr. W. A. Roberts and Dr. Charles T. Hunter. The negative group was composed of Ruggles Barnard, Worthington Seese and David L. Watson. In the case of Dr. Roberts and Worthington Seese they felt they were on the wrong side of the argument, and voiced their feelings.

At the close of the debate questions by the gathering enlivened the affair.

Two hundred gathered to hear the debate, and participate in the business meeting, on this Fathers' Night. Roland Porter conducted the program.

The entire group of numbers for the evening was presented by fathers. A male double quartet sang, this being composed of: Frank Sutton, Stanley Hellerman, Elmer Price, Stephen Miller, Roland Porter, Howard Kester, Paul Evans, Alfred Conrad, and Robert Cooke, with Mr. Rumpf at the piano. The selections rendered were: "Home on the Range," "Buildog on the Bank," "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia," "Swing Low Sweet Chariot," "Nobody Knows the Troubles I've Had," "Good Night, Ladies."

A short business session was held before the program, presided over by the president, Mrs. W. A. Roberts. Five dollars was voted towards the deficit in the cost of conducting the WPA playground last season. Dr. Roberts told of a national poster contest which is sponsored by the National Dental Association.

William J. Barbour, principal of the school, spoke briefly of school activities.

"Miracles of Science" Told To Club Members

The Bristol Exchange Club and Morrisville Rotary Club met in joint session at Leghorn Farms, near Morrisville, last evening, and were much impressed with a talk given by Dr. Harry C. White, former associate of Edison and Steinmetz. Dr. White chose as his topic, "Miracles of Science," and demonstrated many of the points of his talk.

Among the guests at the joint meeting were mail carriers connected with the Morrisville post office.

The speaker told of many of the latest developments made by science with electric lights. He exhibited to the group the smallest electric light in the world which is used on the bronchoscopic and he also showed the gathering the largest light in the world.

"If this light were turned on," Dr. White said, referring to this immense light "every one in this room would go blind and the heat would scorch and blister and be unbearable."

The Doctor also explained the electric knife which is used by surgeons in operating. He told the group that because of the electrical element the knife heats as it cuts.

The different types of rays and their uses and characteristics were also discussed. He said that the colors people see are not really those colors, and demonstrated his point by using a ray on a red article which showed that the article was black.

Want Tax Changes

Washington, Jan. 21.—Leaders of the House Ways and Means Tax subcommittee, which framed the proposed new administration tax program, today insisted demands of business leaders for changes in their plans.

Chairman Vinson, of Kentucky, of the sub-committee, and Democratic aides, argued the tax program, contained modifications that they will not consider any tax program which contains the present total of revenues and thus further delays balancing of the budget.

Mexico Boosts U. S. Tariffs

Washington, Jan. 21.—The American State Department today viewed with extreme concern the sudden imposition by President Cardana of Mexico of a tariff on American imports ranging from 100 to 200%. The action was taken without notification to the United States and in the face of received promises by Cardana saying higher tariff balances were not contemplated. In effect, the drastic tariff increases, virtually embargoing American goods.

Foreign Trade Expanded

Washington, Jan. 21.—Demands for American and other foreign materials last year expanded American foreign trade to the highest level since 1930, preliminary Commerce Department studies revealed today.

Coupled with heavy outward crop movements, a foreign preference for armaments showed U. S. exports close to the $3,400,000,000 mark, an increase of 35% over 1936.

At the same time, imports soared to $3,000,000,000, a gain of 28% over the previous year and giving the nation a favorable trade balance of $250,000,000 for 1937.

Execute Chinese Officials

Shanghai, Jan. 21.—Nine high Chinese officials were executed and 16 others were dismissed from their posts under Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek today for failing to do their duties in defending China against Japan.

An official statement stated one army corporal commander, one brigadier, one court martial judge, two regimental commanders, three battalion commanders, and one chief officer had been slain for neglect of their war duties.

Heavy Fighting at Teruel

Hendaye, Jan. 21.—Franco Spanish border—Heavy fighting raged around the Teruel battle front in eastern Spain today as the insurgents refused their bid to capture the city.

Insurgent officers claimed the rebels were gaining and that national air-planes were placed in a major role.

Rebel authorities at Salamanca issued a communique stating their troops had captured several loyalist trenches in day-long fighting and had inflicted severe losses on the government forces, taking 400 prisoners.

Magician Entertains Members of Scout Troop

Bristol Troop No. 1, Boy Scouts of America, held its weekly meeting in the social hall of Bristol Presbyterian Church, Monday evening, at 7.30. The merit badge review board met and examined many of the boys for merit badges for which they had been working.

At 8.30 the troop received a surprise visit from Arthur Brooks, a local magician. Mr. Brooks showed the boys some interesting feats, including the disappearing wand and the knotted handkerchiefs. The most spectacular demonstration by Mr. Brooks was one called "swallowing needles," in which he placed 10 needles in his mouth, tied together with a piece of string. A minute later he drew them forth all threaded on the string.

The meeting closed with the Scout Oath and the Law.

"GOGGLES BANDIT" BEGINS LONG JAIL TERM

William Coleroff, 24, of Phila.,
Attacked Wayne Milnor,
of Bath Road

ADMITS ROBBERIES

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 22.—(INS)—William Coleroff, 24, identified as the "goggle bandit" who terrorized shopkeepers in this city, today began serving a term of 15 to 40 years in Eastern Penitentiary after pleading guilty to nine hold-ups in Quarter Sessions Court here.

Coleroff was arrested January 6 while attempting to hold up a chain store in North Philadelphia. Wayne Milnor, 25, of Bath Road, Bristol, manager of the store, grappled with Coleroff and was slugged on the head with a pistol.

Two detectives were attracted by the free-for-all, which had involved a clerk in the store, and helped subdue the bandit. Coleroff, who later identified Coleroff as the robber, had 17 stitches taken in a scalp wound.

Detectives said Coleroff readily admitted the robbery of eight chain stores and a clothing establishment, which netted him $749. The prisoner said he embarked on a career of crime to recoup losses suffered when employees of his restaurant went on a sit-down strike and forced him out of business.

Bucks County Women Capture Many Awards

Bucks county farmers' wives, long noted for their culinary skill, again placed in various first places in the food exhibition at the State Farm Products show at Harrisburg, according to Miss Edna Stephany, home economics representative of the county.

Miss Clara S. Rice, Doylestown, R. D. No. 2, won first place with apple jelly in the canning and jelly class.

First place for canned dandelion was won by Mrs. H. W. MacNair, of Mechanicsville, who placed second in string beans, and third in corn.

Miss Margaret Cole, Perkaskie, placed second with apple jelly.

Second place in green string beans was won by Miss Evelyn Shoemaker, Perkaskie, R. D.

Two first places, one in canned vegetable display and another in canned meat display were won by Miss Emma Moyer, Perkaskie, R. D. No. 1. She also placed second in a display of jelly.

Joseph Moyer, Perkaskie, R. D. No. 1, placed second in a canned vegetable display and fifth in canned fruit display.

Mrs. Frank Moll Chalfont, won fourth place in the pajama class.

Miss Mary Crouthamel, Fountainville, placed fifth in a bed covering class.

Other exhibitors included Mrs. J. Arthur Shelly, Fountainville, Miss Dorothy Shelly, Fountainville, Miss Emma Moyer, Perkaskie, R. D. No. 1; Miss Naomi Palmer, Quakertown, R. D.; Miss Mary M. Rice, Mechanicsville; Miss Grace Leatherman, Plumsteadville; Miss Marion Shull, Danboro; Miss Grace Miller, Doylestown; Miss Verna Chittick, Doylestown, R. D.; and Mrs. MacNair, who exhibited in 10 classes.

IS RE-NAMED PRESIDENT

Annual Meeting of Contributors Held Last Night and Officers Are Re-Elected

The total circulation of books from the Bristol Free Library during last year was 25,000, according to the annual report of the president, Clifford L. Anderson.

The report of Mr. Anderson was submitted at the annual meeting of the contributors held last night.

In his report, Mr. Anderson urged more to become contributors and aid in the support of this worthy institution.

Mr. Anderson said: "Why not become a contributor even in a small way and help continue and preserve and aid in the growth and development of this much needed department of our civic life, which brings hours of enjoyment to young and old alike?"

At the meeting Mr. Anderson was re-named president, and Mrs. Griffith L. Williams was re-elected secretary and treasurer. The same board of governors was re-elected and the same committees re-named.

The report reads:

To the Contributors of

The Bristol Free Library:

Your President and Board of Managers give the following report of your Library for the year 1937, which closes the twenty-second year of its existence.

The total circulation of books for the year 1937 was 25,000.

During 1937, 548 new membership cards were taken out and 902 readers made use of the Library reading room.

The adult readers included High School students. Half the books taken out were non-fiction.

Your Book Committee added 600 books to the Library during 1937, of which 450 were purchased and 150 were gifts.

The Library subscribes to the following: Popular Mechanics, Harper's Bazaar, Cosmopolitan, National Geographic, Good Housekeeping, Rosicrucian Digest, Saturday Evening Post, Hygeia, Elks, Time, Christian Science, Monitor.

The workers in the book-binding department re-bound 800 books, returning them in excellent condition at a minimum cost for the continued hard usage library books receive.

Your Library Committee has continued to maintain the Library and its equipment in an excellent and most satisfactory manner.

The Book Committee has met all calls for current fiction and by care and study, kept the shelves satisfactorily stocked, and at a minimum cost and within their appropriation.

Your Finance Committee was greatly disappointed in the apparent lack of interest on the part of the public that was shown in their response to the call for contributions.

Rising Opposition To Guffey For Governor

By Tony S. Smith

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, Jan. 21.—(INS)—A rising tide of opposition to the proposed gubernatorial candidacy of U. S. Sen. Joseph F. Guffey confronted Democratic organization slate-makers today.

Backed by Philadelphia leaders high in the councils of the party, a definite move to "stop Guffey" has spread throughout the commonwealth and is being reflected in the series of "feeler" conferences now being conducted by State Chairman David L. Lawrence.

Lawrence has been meeting with county chairmen and members of the state committee from Eastern and Central Pennsylvania during the past several days to obtain a cross section of political feeling among local leaders and the rank and file of the party.

And, it was learned, the sentiment in these meetings has been strongly in favor of Secretary of Highways Warren Van Dyke to the exclusion of Guffey.

Despite obvious dissatisfaction with the Democratic ranks, however, Guffey still was believed to have the inside track for the organization's support in the May primary.

HEAVY ACCIDENT TOLL

Although there was a decrease of more than 6 per cent in the total number of accidental deaths from all causes during 1937, traffic deaths increased, reaching a new high of 40,000 in the United States. These annual insurance company figures are startling, in view of the great effort put forth during the year in safety campaigns.

The company's bulletin, which shows a rise of 2,000 motor vehicle fatalities over the previous year, estimates that about once in every ten days there was a traffic crash in which five or more persons were killed at one time. It points out, however, that increased automobile mileage must be taken into consideration, and that the increase in deaths may be proportionately less than the increase in mileage. Nevertheless, the figures are a challenge to the nation.

Every indication, particularly the index of the National Safety Council, points to a toll of about 104,000 killed in accidents of one kind or another, the highest figure for any year with the single exception of 1936, when the all-time high of 111,000 was reported.

An increase for 1937 over 1936 also was recorded in occupational accident fatalities. The score for accidental deaths in homes or in places other than traffic showed a slight drop for the year.

COLLUSION AND CRIME

Collusion, which is defined by the dictionary as a secret agreement for fraudulent purposes, has long been rumored to be the practice between certain policemen and criminals in the large cities of the nation.

Vice and gambling, prohibited by law yet condoned, even participated in, by many citizens without whom it could not exist, are the most fruitful sources of money in the pockets of professional crooks and a few peace officers false to their trust. Policemen of this type not only become clandestine members of underworld society and enemies of the decent public which pays their wages, but also a knife in the back of their honest fellow officers of the law.

A hatred of the underworld has been instilled into the police of New York City during the last few days at the funerals of two patrolmen who were killed by robbers. How policemen who stood with bared and bowed heads at the biers of Officers Zaccor and Tornatore can have intimacy with known violators of the law is beyond comprehension.

Crime must be nipped in the bud and the bud is that place of lawless activity against which the vice and gambling squads are directed.

What do your youngsters think of you? Well, were you awed by the wisdom of oldsters when you were 21?

The moving finger writes and, having writ, moves on—then goes back to change 1937 to 1938.

Men are supposed to make funny faces when they shave; but they make funnier faces when they don't shave.

Men may eat up feminine flattery; but, if that is the only conversational food for thought that a woman offers, they are soon fed up.

A couple of those 30-hour-a-week jobs ought to be about right for the fellow who thinks you should perspire once a day to keep in shape.

The Great Game of Politics

Roper, usually under White House instructions, and it is fairly well studded with Administration stooges. The President in the past has received their recommendations and then, pressed by his radical friends and own inclinations, goes blithely in the other direction. There is not the least reason to believe that this conference in any way has cleared the atmosphere, nor changed the situation.

SOME OF the more independent of the original members of this council resigned a year or so ago because they felt they were being put in a somewhat boobish position. It seemed to them that their desire to co-operate and live up to the original conception of a "Business Men's Advisory Council" was being used to make it easier to swing the country in a direction it should not be taken and make it practically impossible for them to protest. At one time there was a concerted movement within the council for wholesale resignations, but the persuasive Mr. Roper and a sense of personal prudence reduced the movement to impotency and the defections that occurred were individual.

THERE WAS in the advisory council's recommendations nothing new. These things have been urged upon the President in a much more emphatic way by various groups before, and the fact is that the President before more than once has acquiesced in and approved every one of these recommendations in conversation with his conservative advisers—gone even farther in their direction than the council urged. There is not a single item in that program which he has not endorsed personally in the past and to which his conservative counselors have not felt he was committed. This, however, has not prevented him from being in sympathetic accord with measures and policies pressed upon him by his left-wing friends which sharply conflict with the conservative proposals and nullify any movement in their direction.

IF THE council's recommendations and the President's responses, at the Wednesday conference, as given out by his secretary, are analyzed, it will be seen that the council urged upon the President only the conservative "confidence restoring" things to which he was known—or, at any rate, thought—to be favorably disposed; that it accompanied these recommendations with the most conciliatory and sympathetic expressions toward various pet legislative ideas of Mr. Roosevelt, which opened the door for him to go as far as he liked. The best example of this was the vague declaration in favor of the "protection of farm income through Federal legislation" which can easily be construed as an endorsement by the Advisory Business Council of the monstrous and incredibly complicated crop-control bill now in conference committee, and of either the contents or the effect they cannot possibly know anything at all.

IT WILL be further noted that to every one of the "confidence restoring" recommendations in which Mr. Roosevelt acquiesced and which he had previously privately espoused he did so, according to his secretary, "with reservations," which again leaves him free to do what he likes and makes them mean nothing at all. In brief, the advisory council gave a great deal and got nothing at all, which was exactly the way it was "planned." No wonder the left-wing group chuckled after it was over. It was, to a very considerable extent, a phony performance. This column started out to discuss the confusion in the political policy of the Administration, but got sidetracked. That subject will be pursued another day.

I am an Advertising Man

For over thirty years I have been writing advertisements for national advertisers—shoes, soap, cereals, automobiles, radios, tobacco, blankets, tooth-powder.

To me it is the most fascinating work in the world—learning about the merits of merchandise and then telling people about them—bringing greater comfort, and enjoyment, into people's lives—introducing people to new pleasures, helping them to get the most for their money.

Besides being fascinating, it is satisfying. My intimate experience with advertisers has shown me that, except for rare exceptions, the manufacturers and merchants of this nation lean over backwards to be sincere and honest.

The law of advertising is simple once one understands its working—the more people know about the merit of a product, the more people buy it. The greater the volume of sales, the less the cost to manufacture. Savings in making mean either lower prices to the consumer or greater value put back into the merchandise.

As an advertising man I can sincerely affirm that it pays to read the advertisements in the newspapers—for news of new things, for news of bargains and savings.

There are thousands of other men—and women—devoting their lives to advertising writing, who will tell you the same thing. They know!

"Women In Love" by May Christie

CHAPTER XV

The night of the store dance arrived.

It disconcerted Ann to realize how much she had been looking forward to it. Why, she was even more excited about it than she had been a year ago at her own coming-out out party at the Ritz-Carlton!

"Being democratic is all very well," sneered Claire, "but I can't think why you want to mix with that rabble!"

"They're splendid men and girls!" Ann had flared back. "A thousand times better than the parasites and show-offs who live for bridge and cocktails and gossip!"

Claire had laughed nastily, and gone off for an evening's contract at Carol Dittmar's, with Captain de Freyn.

Bernice had been nice about it, or at any rate had attempted consolation by the remark that she didn't blame Ann one bit, considering the good-looking Paul Bradley would be at the dance, and Ann would have a chance at "vamping" him. . . .

Ann wore the cloudy pink tulle that had been made for her own coming-out party.

It was a lovely gown, and caught on each shoulder with a silver star, and worn with silver slippers.

A rich frequenter of "The Laughing Pig" had that day presented Bernice with a corsage of white orchids. Having no evening date, Bernice insisted that Ann wear them to the store dance.

She fastened them, complete with silver love-knot, to a silver star on Ann's shoulder. They curled in waxy beauty about her right ear.

"And now we'll requisition the family ermine, so you'll knock 'em dead!" Bernice giggled.

This was a white fur cloak with a great collar of white fox, belonging to their mother, but borrowed by the daughters as occasion arose.

"Oh, Lolly would never let me!" Ann protested.

"For heaven's sake, it'll be in he in any day! Grab it while the grabbing's good!" counseled the older girl.

When Bernice swung it about her shoulders, Ann stared at herself in the mirror. There could be no lovelier frame for her beauty than this ermine wrap with its great swirl of fur about her face, and—since she was taller than Lolly—from the knee downwards there was a foam of rose-pink skirts.

"You look like down on the high Alps, darling—or should I say sunrise?" Bernice looked enviously at Ann.

Ann had gained ten pounds avoidance through her duties at "The Laughing Pig." It wasn't becoming, but what could one do about it?

Ann's thoughts were on Paul Bradley. What would he think of her in the lovely gown and ermine wrap?

Was it fair to flaunt such expensive things in the face of her fellow-workers?

Bernice, however, insisted on it.

To Ann's relief, she found she wasn't sporting the only ermine cloak at the ball. Brenda Selz was in red chiffon velvet with a similar wrap, and there were several others in the foyer outside the ballroom.

The party began.

Stiff at first, but gradually livening up as men and women lost their shyness over mingling with the different "grades." . . .

Here a little "contingent" (one who is temporarily employed in the store during holiday rush or sales-days) would be dancing with a floor-manager (who knew nothing about her except that she was lovely to look at) and wasn't the haughty stylist from Paris (she of the black satin presence) floating around in the arms of Clancy, the detective of the employees' entrance?

A voluptuous vision in too-tight white satin, Cora Schwartz of the Costume Jewelry was having her wittings with the Art Director of the Advertising, whom she adored.

Cheng Lo, the Chinese tea attendant from the de luxe fitting-salon, in an orchid gown she'd wrangled from a little Miss Shellfish, the Misses' Buyer, for the occasion, was flirting, shyly but effectively, in Oriental manner, with a good-looking stock boy.

Miss Shellfish herself, who had spent two hours in the store's beauty-parlor, and who had removed her glasses for the evening, was in deed transformed. With softly blooming cheeks and hair delectably waved (and whisper it!) tinted, she looked ten years younger, as Maxie Furchheimer, the portly manufacturer of Misses' Dresses to whom she gave so many orders, was whispering to her as they danced.

"You're as light as a feather, Maxie," she told him ecstatically, smiling at the red-faced fifty-year-old. To her he was amazingly good-looking. Virile was her inward description of him. She was an avid reader of light novels.

"Say, Gerdy, if you keep flashing that dimple on me, I'll lose my head!"

"I don't mind if you lose it!" Miss Shellfish flung at him coyly. Oh! this was a night of nights!

Renita Parrish was dancing with Gordon Gavin, who had dined with her at her apartment earlier that evening, through pique with Ann.

He had wanted to take Ann to the store dance, but she had absolutely turned him down, and he was furious about it.

But Renita had given him an amazingly good dinner. Snails were his passion, and, among other dishes, Renita had had a bowlful for him, with the right wine at the right temperature, and even a bottle of champagne towards the end of dinner. He felt completely reinforced.

Ann was dancing with a handsome window-dresser, Gordon turned his eyes resolutely away from her and her white orchids and curly bob, and redoubled his attentions to Renita, who was in slinky Nile green.

Tonight she simply had to be a Cleopatra if ever she was to bewitch this reluctant Mark Antony! But she was making headway with him, after a long drought, amatorially speaking.

She, too, like Miss Shellfish, had visited the beauty-parlor, but with more stunning results. She was a handsome girl with a lovely figure, and her auburn hair was exquisitely arranged in a straight sweep from her forehead and little sculptured curls at the back of her neck.

Perfume at $25 an ounce had been sprayed upon her hair, the loles of her small ears, the hem of her dress. Gordon and she moved in a divine aroma, as she had planned they would, cost or no cost.

"We dance well together, don't you think?" She lifted her green eyes, whose heavy lids were touched with jade-green shadow paste, artistically. Pale green powder misted the flush upon her cheeks.

"We certainly do."

The music swelled about them. Renita snuggled closer to him. She closed her eyes.

At that moment, Gordon saw the window-dresser leading Ann to the door of the ballroom, and Ann stopping to speak to Paul Bradley.

It didn't mean anything, of course. And yet—

Five minutes later, Ann was back in the ballroom, dancing with the merchandise-manager.

Over Renita's head, Gordon kept tabs. They looked marvelous together. There was no denying it, though Gordon loathed Paul Bradley.

They danced the evening.

It was the famous waltz from "Naughty Marietta," named "Sweet Mystery of Life."

Gad! if only he himself had been dancing that exquisite number with Ann!

Why, in heaven's name, had he come here with Renita Parrish, who was going to be a regular incubus!

Oh! to get rid of her!

It was a good hour before he was able to get a dance with the other girl.

She had promised all kinds of people, which, thought Gordon snobbishly, was carrying affability too far. And twice during that period, she had danced with the merchandise-manager.

"Look here! Let's sit this out! It's stiflingly hot in here. I've found a cute little balcony with chairs in it—sort of a sun porch. I'll get your wrap," Gordon suggested to Ann.

"All right." It would be nice to get a breath of air. It was a balmy night for the middle of December, and there was a moon over Broadway.

They went out on the balcony.

Wrapped in the ermine cloak with its swirl of white fox fur, Ann drew standard highway from New York to Los Angeles and back. Through the mass river water will circulate through 2,000 miles of pipe. Otherwise it might take the dam 50 years or more to cool properly.

In the center a waterfall 1,650 feet wide and more than twice as high as Niagara will hurtle over the spillway and dissipate its force in a concrete trough 30 feet deep, built to prevent undermining of the foundation. At flood stage a million cubic feet of water a second will go over the fall.

On either end will be a power house as long as two city blocks, each containing nine generators. Powered by 4,500 second-feet of water, each turbine will have a horsepower of 147,000, nearly double the size of any other ever built. The 18 will produce an annual output estimated at $320,000,000 kilowatt-hours, almost twice the present total power production of Washington, Northern Oregon, Northern Idaho and Western Montana.

Above the dam the Columbia will rise a maximum of 375 feet. It will form an artificial lake 151 miles long, extending north past the Canadian boundary, and averaging nearly a mile in width. A few farms and the present site of the small town of Marcus, Wash., will be flooded.

A pumping plant with twelve pumps, each of 1,600 cubic feet per second capacity, will lift water from the lake 280 feet into a storage reservoir 23 miles long covering 21,000 acres. From that point it will be diverted, principally by gravity, over the 1,200,000 acres of the Columbia Basin, an area larger than the state of Delaware.

The thirsty land that now receives less than 10 inches of rainfall annually will grow almost anything when watered. It will provide homes and substantial farms for an estimated 50,000 families.

PETRICK LEADS TEAM IN WINNING GAME

By "Herm" Corn

Using his famous under the basket shot, "Mike" Petrick led the Mill Street Boys' Club to another glorious victory when they defeated the protégés of Assistant Coach Bruce Gillard by the most convincing score of 33 to 15.

From the start of the clash, both teams did not seem to have an edge on each other until the Streeters let loose their fireworks in the second period.

At this point the boys from the main street hit their stride and there was no stopping them. Their excellent passing, clever blocking and sensational shooting allowed them to forge continually ahead and while the J. V.'s obtained only 3 field goals and one gift toss they pulled up 8 double-deckers and a charity throw to lead at half-time, 17-7.

In the third quarter no bearer of the Red and Grey could get near the basket for a set shot. Nearly every field goal made was dropped from back of the foul line and it was only due to the fight displayed by the home-standers that they were in the running at all.

The final canto had little in store for the Cardinal team. Although they fought desperately taking shots from all positions of the court, the M. S. B. C. gathered six counters to Bristol's four. Final score: M. S. B. C., 33; Bristol, 15.

Joe Clarella and Jack Schweizer led the Bunnies in the scoring column with two double-deckers apiece for 4 points.

For the Mill Streeters, "Mike" Petrick, stocky center, who was their keyman on almost every scoring play and "Buck" Profy scored 10 points and 9 points respectively. Bill Mignoni, pivot man for the Blue and Grey, came close behind with 7 counters, two twin-pointers and three fouls.

A Fighting Champion

By BURNLEY

What's this? A throwback to the good old days, no less. We are referring to Fearless Frederick Steele, the ruler of all the mid-dleweights, who has committed the modern heresy of becoming a fighting champion.

Poor Freddie has the old fashioned notion in his noggin that a champion's duty is to prove his superiority over any and all contenders. No one is barred when the Steele socker lays his crown jewels on the block. In fact Fred goes around hunting up contenders. Last year the 160-pound dictator was the busiest of all ring champs, defending his title often and engaging in several over-weight bouts.

He repulsed the tide bids of Babe Risko, Frankie Battaglia and Ken Overlin among others—all topnotch middleweights and not set-ups. Steele was willing and anxious to meet Fred Apostol indoors for the title, but Mike Jacobs insisted on that one being a non-championship affair, as he wanted to save the title match for outdoors.

Nevertheless, Freddie wanted to put his title on the line, so he signed with Jacobs to meet the Glen Lee-Solly Krieger victor in a championship bout in March.

Freddie, we salute you. You're a real champion—and that's a rarity nowadays.

BRISTOL CELTICS SWAMP BYBERRY A. A. FIVE

Led by the lanky "Charlie" Hughes, who hit the cords for a total of eleven field goals, the Bristol Celtics swamped the Byberry A. A. five on the latter's floor last night. Final score was 59-25.

From the start it was evident that the Bristol boys would pile up an overwhelming score. They seemed to score at will and held a 30-15 point lead at half-time.

Besides Hughes, "Jimmy" Lake and "Billy" Hughes did some fancy shooting, scoring a quintet of double-deckers each. The losers had Woody and Butterworth as their leading stars.

To Celebrate President's Birthday at Trevoze

Lower Bucks County will celebrate the President's Birthday, January 29th, at Penn Valley Park located on Old Lincoln Highway, Trevoze.

Howard Black is chairman of the executive committee and is organizing a general committee in the various townships to distribute the tickets. The names of the general committee will be announced soon.

The chairman of the Birthday Celebration Committee is delighted to have found a place, free of charge, conveniently located and large enough to accommodate, comfortably, 600 people. This will enable the committee to turn over to the National Foundation every dollar taken in, so that a great financial reservoir will be created in an effort to triumph over the dreaded disease of infantile paralysis, through the avenues of research and treatment.

The New Foundation will carry on a broad-gauged educational campaign, prepared under expert medical supervision; this will be placed within the reach of the doctors and the hospitals of the country. This will take shape in four ways:

1. Science Research.
2. Epidemic Action.
3. Telling to doctors and parents the new care now known to prevent crooked backs, curvatures of the spine, twisted bodies, and contracted limbs.
4. Dollars to Orthopedic Centers (Hospitals, Clinics, etc.) for the immediate Restoring of Human Wreckage.

In order that everybody can have the opportunity to participate in this humanitarian cause, the executive committee has made the admission fee low. Amusement will be provided in order that all may have an opportunity to participate in the kind of wholesome recreation they like.

N. J. S. D. FIVE TO PLAY BRISTOL HIGH SCHOOL

Tonight the local basketballers will have their big test of the season when they meet up with the battling mutes from the New Jersey School for the Deaf.

The Red and Gray haven't had much success with the boys from the State Capital. They were topped twice last year by the N. J. S. D. scoring avalanche. In the first day the New Jersey team, with a pile-driving scoring attack in the last few minutes of play, swished a pair of field goals through the cords to nose out the Cardinal and Grey quintet by the narrow margin of 30-27.

In the second tilt of last year, the mutes displayed their power and drive again, only more so when they tallied a 34 to 22 win. These two wins were the only times the Bunnies were defeated last year.

This annum the locals are out to break the so-called "jinx" and come out on top with their first win over the New Jersey aggregation.

Coach Juenger will start the varsity five that has been carrying the honors of Bristol High far and wide: Bill Gallagher and Pete De Luca at forward; Wilbur Van Lente at center; and Gusti Carnvale and Dan Di Midio at guards. His reliable reserves for the game will be Steve Florito, Joe Tunis, Pat Capecci, Joe Quigley, Bud Carter and Jack Louder.

Consider Big Battleships

(Copyright, 1938.) London, Jan. 21.—Construction of 43,000-ton battleships mounting 12-inch guns, is being considered by the United States, Britain and France, to meet Japan's national building threat, International News Service learned today.

Discussion regarding the proposed super-warships which would be virtual floating fortresses, capable of cruising without visiting their bases, are being carried out through diplomatic channels.

SPORTSMEN'S SHOW TO OPEN IN PHILA TOMORROW

The Sportsmen's Show opens in Philadelphia tomorrow, and continues until the following Saturday night, January 29. It will be an eight-day show and will be open on Sunday. The hours are from 10:30 a. m. to 10:30 p. m., except Sunday, when it opens at two p. m.

It is called the Motor Boat and Sportsmen's Show, for it also includes the largest display of motor, sail, paddle and other craft ever seen in Philadelphia—everything from Eskimo kyaks and Indian birchbark canoes to 75-foot cabin cruisers and mile-a-minute speed boats.

The sports program will assemble a group of champions in their respective sports, who will take part in the entertainment to be held twice daily—afternoons and evenings. Among these champs will be Herb Welch, fly casting champion; George Keyes, pistol champion; Maurice Hoffman, tuna fishing champion; Eber Peck, log-rolling champion; Perry Green, wood chopping champion; Wally Soule, canoe tilting champion, and a number of other champions and a whole raft of others who, while not champions, rate high.

A number of sports organizations will hold meetings at the Show—the Wild Life League, the Delaware River Yachtsmen's League, the Isaac Walton League, the Wilderness Club, Ducks Unlimited, etc.

A 60,000-gallon tank in the center of the hall will be used for water sports, with stages at each end for other sport demonstrations, such as fly casting, bait or plug casting, wood chopping, etc. Stands at each end of the tank will afford spectators a fine view of everything going on—a new feature at this year's Show.

Among the features will be exhibits of wild life, game animals, birds and fish—an Indian village, a Hudson Bay trapper's camp, Eskimo hunters from the Arctic Circle; fly and bait casting contests for rod and gun clubs and individuals, deep sea fishing tests, for tarpon, tuna and marlin; pistol, rifle and bow-and-arrow marksmanship; golf and tennis exhibitions by pros and amateurs; the Pennsylvania State Table Tennis Championship matches, badminton, archery, quoits and other sports, including a number of new games for practice, exercise and recreation. A lot of new devices for camping convenience and comfort will be shown. The development in trailer comfort and convenience will be surprising, trailers being shown in numbers, as well as sport models in motor cars.

There will be exhibits of live game fish, an exhibit of live North American game animals and birds and a costly display of pelts and mounted game. Displays will also include rare pheasants and a lot of exotic birds of similar game varieties, from all over the world.

Former Governor Gifford Pinchot, famous as a fisherman, is going to keep up his habit of attending the Philadelphia Motor Boat and Sportsmen's Show and is going to see if he is a better fly caster than Herb Welch. Both boast that they never kill a fish—they put 'em back—for other sportsmen to catch. Governor Earle, also an outdoors sportsman, will again be there, together with other prominent sportsmen, lovers of the outdoors and enthusiasts for wild life preservation and conservation. State officials from several states, including Pennsylvania's State Game Commission chairman, Nicholas Biddle, will be there; Adolph Muller, his predecessor as well. They will all talk sport—mainly sport in the Great Outdoors.

Library President Urges More Support For Institution

Your Library continues to have more and more demands upon it, year by year, and its growth can only be measured by the amount of contributions received.

A small contribution by the readers alone, would help wonderfully in keeping your Library apace with the demands that are asked to be met.

Your Library is a fine and much needed part of our civic life, and managed by public spirited citizens, who give of their time and money, in order that lovers of reading and students, who need scientific books and books of reference may find them for the asking.

The Board of Managers continues to express its thanks to Senator Joseph R. Grundy for providing a fine and attractive home for your Library, and also for his generous support.

Our Librarian desires that our appreciation be shown the following young ladies: Miss Miriam Scott Miss Barbara Comfort, Miss Pauline Napoli, Miss Jennie Tisione, for the free service rendered your Library.

The Board also extends its appreciation for the capable and efficient manner in which your Librarian, Miss Mary Rodgers, and her assistants, have conducted the operation of the Library.

It is impossible to meet all demands, but we know they do their very best.

Japan To Strike Another Victim After Chinese

intention to make war by one of the men who, in the cabinet of the government, would be among those to decide to make war, brought pressing inquiries to the Tokio Foreign Office.

"No," the Foreign Office declared with the simplicity of utter truth, "no, he did not say it." This method of denial staggers the newcomer to the East. Once during the Japanese press conference in Shanghai the question arose whether Japanese warplanes were flying over the settlement in violation of law and their own agreement. The official Japanese spokesman said "No, they have not done so."

Just then we heard low-flying planes. Everybody looked out the window, saw the Rising Sun of Japan on the wings of bombers directly over our headquarters in the heart of the settlement.

"No," said the Japanese spokesman, "they are not Japanese, and if they were, they are not flying over the settlement."

Not a man cracked a smile. We simply wondered if we had lost our senses. It is easy to dismiss the type of Chauvinistic literature against the whites which constantly appears in Japan under titles like "The Illuminance of a Japano-American War" by Lieut. General Sato, or "An Anglo-Japanese War is Inevitable" by Mr. Ikezaki, or "Will Japan and the Soviet Union Fight?" by Mr. Uehara, and finally even "Japan's War Against the Whole World" by anonymous patriots.

But what of the authenticated pronouncements of Japan's greatest leaders, beginning with the memorial submitted by Premier Tanaka to the Emperor in 1927 and ending with this month's declaration by Admiral Suet-sugu, and all speaking the same language?

It is difficult to dismiss a program which, like Premier Tanaka's has been carried out to date with the precision of a railway time-table. I have a copy of his famous memorial in it he declares:

"In order to conquer the world we must first conquer China. If we succeed in conquering China, the rest of the Asiatic countries and the South Seas will fear us and surrender. This is the plan left to us by Emperor Meiji, the success of which is essential to our national existence."

Ten years he named as the time required for the preliminary steps of conquering Manchuria and China, and today precisely ten years later the Japanese armies are turning from their victories in China to ask:

"What next?"

Because it is less known, though equally important, the Honjo-Minami memorial to the Emperor, submitted at the outset of the conquest of Manchuria in 1931, is even more interesting. It declares:

"We all agree that the revival of China, the rise of the Soviet Union, and the intrusion of the United States of America into the Western Pacific are in fundamental conflict with the national policy of our empire."

Happily this memorial proceeds to state that after the conquest of China:

"We must invade Siberia up to Lake Baikal and compel Russia to give up all the territory east of the Lena River so that the Far Eastern Republic may be revived according to our direction. Thus the Sea of Japan and the Sea of Okhotsk will be entirely in our possession."

"Once free from any maritime attack on our north and west, our navy will be able to concentrate on the south and east. Having China and Eastern Siberia with their rich resources under our control, our empire will be a first-class power, secure and invulnerable, like a city of metal surrounded by water."

"It is safe to predict that after ten years of exploitation of such vast resources, the wealth of our empire can be compared favorably with that of the United States of America, all other nations falling a long way behind."

"With such financial power and material resources, our empire can easily maintain an army equal to that of Russia and China combined, and at the same time build a navy equal to that of England and America together."

To hold the supremacy of the Western Pacific, we need only drive the Americans to the east of Hawaii, and expel the English from Singapore.

"Not only China, but also the Dutch East Indies, Australia and New Zealand will be accessible to us. Now Russia and China are still in the reconstruction stage, weak and divided. With our invincible army we can easily crush any opposition. But if we wait until China is fully unified under Chiang Kai-Shek's ambitious plan, or until after the completion of Russia's economic program, the realization of our hopes may become impossible."
